FIGURES THAT TALK.

BY REV. W. H. ADAMS.

Talk is cheap; and torrents of it are being poured out of late by the Horner propaganda in disparagement of the Methodist church and, in this section particularly, in disparagement of that church's operations in the Madoc district. We are constantly assured in very vulgar verbiage that the church in question is inefficient or effete, and that unless she undergo some wondrous metamorphosis it is her doom to be soon and suddenly destroyed. Proof of this is not offered; indeed is not thought necessary; it is deemed enough for us to take the bald and boisterous declaration, set our house in order, and prepare for the day when we shall tear down our steeples and demolish our churches—or, forsooth, auction them for warehouses or shambles.

Now, for one, I am, somehow or other, so constituted that I must have reasonable proof before I swallow these astounding statements. But there is not a man in the whole loud-voiced faction who will furnish the ghost of a shadow of such proof. There is not a man who can furnish a solitary fact that will weigh in the argument. There is not a man who can find the least vestige of a foundation on which to base these malicious slanders.

Proof, positive, palpable proof, is all of an opposite character. Facts all preponderate in the opposite scale. Facts, solid facts, all go to demonstrate very clearly that the Methodist church in the Madoc district is both active and efficient; that she has been active and efficient in the past, and that there is no sign of inefficiency or inertia overtaking her in the days to come.

Having been elected Secretary of the district, it has been my duty during the last few days to handle the official returns that have just come in from the fourteen fields into which the district is divided. Now, figures are usually dry details, but they crystallize for us in these schedules, the labors, and travels, and consecration, and prayers of fourteen Ministers of Gospel during the past year, and the zealous christian work of over three hundred officials of the church during the same period. Moreover, these figures represent facts which no amount of loud talk can dissolve or destroy. And these are the facts, and the only accessible or reliable facts, by which we may estimate, or measure, or weigh the Methodism of this district.

I have been led to compare the figures with those of the year 1890, when the Madoc district, as at present constituted was first formed. The result is of such a character that it burles back the lie upon the teeth of those who defame us, and it must reassure every good Methodist that the church of his choice is both alive and alert.

Since 1890 there have been reported removed by death and other causes 2,182 members of our church in the district. In that year our membership stood at 2,023, and this year, despite the large loss so indicated, we report 3,085 members—a net increase in the semi-decade of 462. In 1890 we had 39 Sunday Schools 231 teachers, and 1,910 scholars; this year we report 47 schools, 327 teachers, and 2,499 scholars. In these schools during the past year nearly two thousand library books and four thousand weekly and fortnightly illustrated periodicals have been circulating, and who can estimate the far-reaching and beneficent effects of so much pure and wholesome literature in the land?

In 1890 again, the district raised for Connexional Funds $1,341, and for circuit proposes $4,103. This year we report for the former $3,051 and for the latter $7,400. In 1890 we owned property to the value of $90,000, this year our property is worth more than $100,000. The grand total raised on the district in 1890 was $14,037, this year, despite the hard times, it amounted to $16,651. Other figures that further illustrate the life and progress of Methodism in this district are forthcoming but let these suffice.

Now for my first and last word concerning Hornerism. It shows a strange lack of christian charity for any person or party to gloat over the destruction of another, or to make capital out of their discomfiture or downfall. But what does it argue when capital is made out of the pretended or fabricated distress of another, or, in other words, out of the groans, and wilful, and deliberate defamations of a Christian church? We don't question any man's right legitimately to do all the good he can, we rather bid him God speed in his work, but in the name of common decency, we do demand that the men who pose as the special favorites of Heaven, shall at least condescend to speak the truth.

Methodism has been tried here by the stern law of the survival of the fittest. Hornerism now comes to have its test. In five year's time, if God spare us, we shall find the former, as-to-day, still firmly rooted in the soil, and spreading her branches unto places more remote. Of the latter we may safely say in the words of the old aphorism: "Nous verrons que nous verrons."

What a terrible state of affairs there is in England under free trade, as recorded by a correspondent from England to the Orillia Packet. It can't be possible that the writer is a conservative, and that he wrote to a conservative paper.

Would some politician who "stands in" pretty well with the fellows at Ottawa, kindly tell us if the political whitewash now in use at Ottawa is lasting, or is it liable to peel off. It would be a treat to see some of the cabinet in their "natural wood."

There was a complaint made not long ago that the Street committee are building the sidewalks too narrow. To the complainants we would say, Don't have so strong a desire to take up too much room in the world.

"At the station the bride was attired in a brown check travelling costume." This must be a new wrinkle. It is my opinion that brides attend to this before they go to the station.

According to the state of things at Ottawa just now it must be somewhat confusing to the Government to know just which eye to wink.

NEWS FROM THE COUNTRY A FINE PROCESSION.

Last Tuesday, June 25th, was a gala day at the station in Napanee. Farmers were in from all parts of the surrounding country to take home with them the harvesting and hay making machines they had ordered from MESSRS. HAWLEY & SPROULE, the live agents for the enterprising firm of NOXON BROS. MANUFACTURING CO'Y, of Ingersoll. This was HAWLEY & SPROULE's first delivery of farming implements, and they intend having another later on. There were delivered at the station upwards of forty machines, comprising binders, reapers, mowers and rakes. The farmers after loading the machines on their wagons, formed a procession and drove to the Campbell House where they were entertained to a special dinner prepared by Mr. Milling at the expense of NOXON BROS. Mr. G. Co. Mr. Stephen Noxon one of the Company, was present and was indeed pleased to know that the farmers in the vicinity of Napanee had still the old confidence in his Company that they always have had. He being an old Bay of Quinte boy it was a pleasure to see so many of their far famed machines delivered so near his boyhood's home to so many good farmers. It might be just mentioned that Noxon Bros' business has increased over one hundred per cent in the last two years. MESSRS. HAWLEY & SPROULE deserve credit for the business they are doing and they should feel proud of the confidence placed in them by the farmers of this part of the country as well as the Company they represent. The Company were also represented by R. W. Ewen and B. J. Armstrong, two of their general agents who report a large number of sales all over Ontario. There were a number of farmers who were unable to get in for their machines in time for dinner or take part in the procession. About two o'clock the farmers hitched up their teams and started for home pleased with their days outing and also with the treatment they received from HAWLEY & SPROULE and satisfied they had bought the best machines in the market.

Resignations Galore.

The resignation of the Rev. Mr. MacEachern makes the fifth in the history of the Presbyterian church, Napanee. The first who found it necessary to resign was Mr. Steele, then shortly after Mr. Scott, after a long and faithful pastorate, was obliged to tender his resignation and leave. Then Mr. Young for justifiable reasons we have no doubt, resigned twice, but finally he was persuaded to withdraw, and now Mr. MacEachern resigns because of ill health, which will be finally disposed of on the second Tuesday in July. Mr. MacEachern is at present under call to Winchester Springs.

For some distance below the dam there is a very bad rapids and down this the men and logs were hurried, being seen only now and then by the horrified spectators, assembled to see the breaking of the jam. T. W. Aykroyd had gone below the dam about 100 yards to take a picture of the logs when the jam broke and fortunately Sabourin came near that side and was pulled out on a side jam nearly drowned and hurt in the chest and legs. This latter injury was received from a log which struck him while he was being hauled out. His rescue was not one second too soon. Barnard was seen about fifty yards below clinging to a log, but as he did not appear again, it is thought the log struck a side jam a few yards ahead and that he was carried under. The jam has been since cleared away and every effort made to secure the body, but without avail. It is thought he is covered up in the sand and sticks washed down by the current.

A question of Comfort.

"I should think," remarked Mr. Lushforth, "that a woman would be clear miserable carrying around those swelled sleeves."

Boating seems quite common around here now.

On Saturday next there is to be a missionary meeting held here by Mrs. Bowerman and Mrs. Gibson, of Napanee, for the purpose of starting a missionary circle in our midst.

BATH.

As the product of the pen is almost always affected by its surroundings and in looking around for interesting items for your faithful and trusty paper we find a difficulty in obtaining just the material that would interest the thoughtful reader, arising from the fact that mainly this warm and dry weather has driven men and women to some cool retreat where news is not likely to emanate.

We are glad to notice that the Harlem Flats Estate which has been in litigation for a number of years has become closed in favour of the heirs and claimants, of whom there are a large number living in Canada. Among the fortunate ones is Mr. Covert, one of our townsmen, who holds 6 shares. Rev. W. B. Tucker leaves this week for Europe. He will likely return in six weeks.

The annual Pic' Nic' in connection with the Methodist church will take place on second Thursday in July at Millhaven. A grand time is expected and a large attendance from surrounding schools invited.

Looking out from our sanctum we behold the cheerful and stately figure of Rev. H. Sheppard going up the street with his brother Ernest, for a brief visit.

Mr. C. Mills looks quite cheerful over the change of time per G.T.R. mail trains.

England Has a Community of Empires.

England leads the world in acuteness in finding out the better portions of the earth that are attainable and in her enterprise and energy in possessing herself of them. She has quietly as it were, but apparently successfully, laid the foundation for another vast empire in Africa. It extends from the Cape of Good Hope to Lake Tanganyika and is as large as all Europe. Besides her valuable gold mines there, coal and iron have also been found in large quantities, and civilization is advancing in that region as rapidly as it did in California after the gold discoveries, so it is said. England is truly a wonderful nation. In comparison with what she has done in spreading her influence throughout the world, civilizing and leaving her impress on it and accumulating wealth, the achievements of Rome are almost commonplace. What is thus said of the empire of the Caesars might also be said in like comparison of England with the other nationalities, ancient and modern. While Russia, as the most conspicuous in the number, is a vast empire and alike impressive in its area and population, it has exerted very little influence outside of its own domain; not a tithe of what England has. England is indeed a great force, morally and intellectually, in commerce and manufactures, as well as a great power considered in her geographical extensions and military prestige. The British Empire is a community of great empires, of which the latest, but by no means least interesting acquisition is, as said, the vast area, as large as Australia, seized upon by her within the last few years in Africa. A striking illustration of England's comparative commercial supremacy is found in the fact that more than two-thirds of the world's commerce through the Suez Canal is carried on under the British flag and in British bottoms. England is the great trader, the great banker, the great monopolist, the great colonizer, the great conqueror of the earth. What a picture of her colossal achievements is afforded in the mere grouping before the mind's eye of such children of her loins or brain as the United States, the Dominion of Canada, Australia, India, her new and vast African empire, not including Egypt, and the countless islands of the sea over which floats the Cross of St. George as the sign manual of English supremacy.—Oswego Times.

THAT MUDDLED BIT OF HISTORY.

To the Editor of the Napanee Express.

Dear Sir,—I with many others have been waiting to hear the result of that arbitration in the historical point of difference between Messrs. Jarvis and Shorey. In the Beaver some time ago we read an article piteously imploring action, as the state of matters did grave injustice to Mr. Shorey. Mr. Bowerman tried to explain but the paragraph seemed,—was—decidedly lame. In reading these historic statements, so called by Mr. Shorey, I was forcibly reminded of the words "Fools rush in where angels fear to tread." While we certainly want to hear the last of this ill advised controversy, begun by Mr. Shorey, we also want to hear the TRUTH of it. The object of this silence we all understand who have followed with intelligence the various letters written. It is to claim a victory where defeat now lies. And this section being overrun by a class who have more creed than christianity it will not hesitate a moment to perpetrate that which will feed its victory. A READER OF HISTORY.

NERVOUS PEOPLE!

Their Lot Is Not a Happy One.

AT HOME AND ABROAD THEY ARE MISERABLE.

Paine's Celery Compound Gives Them a New Life.

MAKES THEM HAPPY AND STRONG! BRIGHT AND VIVACIOUS!

Every Woman Should Try it.

The life of the nervous woman is most unhappy one. She is continually miserable, and is frequently a burden to herself and family.

Nervousness is produced by a great variety of causes: headaches, biliousness, constipation, dyspepsia, vertigo or giddiness, insomnia, despondency, and a host of other ailments.

As a rule, the use of drugs and medicines containing strong narcotics, only cause afflicted ones to sink deeper in suffering and agony.

Nature's true and permanent cure for all diseases is Paine's Celery Compound, a medicine now freely and wisely prescribed by the best physicians. The proprietors of Paine's Celery Compound have most testimonials from the women of Canada that have ever been given in favor of any other medicine in the world. Thousands have been saved who were once declared to be hopeless and incurable by the doctors.

Mrs. Joseph Vaillant, of Cache Bay, Nipissing District, Ont., who was recently cured of nervous prostration and neuralgia of the heart, writes as follows:—

"For a length of time I suffered very much from nervous prostration and neuralgia of the heart, and was unable to get regular sleep and rest. I used your great medicine Paine's Celery Compound with most beneficial results. I am happy to say that my condition of health is wonderfully improved; my sleep is sweet and natural, and the pains and nervousness which troubled me are banished. I cannot speak too highly of Paine's Celery Compound."

Thos. McGreevy will no doubt prove a valuable adjunct to the Tories at the next general election. His experience in handling the swag will stand him in good stead.

Sir Richard Cartwright's statement that the selling power of farm lands has of late years decreased $10 an acre remains uncontradicted. The statement instead of being over is rather under the mark.

Under the N. P. there are two sets of duties collected, the duty on the imported goods, and the duty paid to the home manufacturer on the enhanced price of the goods which this iniquitous system allows him to levy.

The constituents of the members who assisted with their votes in white-washing the Minister of Railways for his connection with the Curran bridge steal should "make note on it." Men who condone such offences are hardly fit stewards of the public interests.

Since the fishery overseer, Mr. E. H. Sills, seems reluctant to do so, it is not out of order to ask the sitting member for Lennox, Uriah Wilson, M. P., to rise and explain, why the names of all the men taking out a fishing license in this district were not published in the return appearing in the Auditor General's Report for the year ending 30th of June 1894.

When the farmer is prosperous all classes share in his prosperity. It is only when the pursuit of agriculture is successful and increasing that other industries can be legitimately extended. On the farmer depends the success of Canada. It is not by hampering and retarding his progress as the present N. P. does that we are to bring about prosperity, but by abolishing all restrictions and according to him the privilege of selling in the dearest and buying in the cheapest market.

Here are a few items from the trade and navigation returns for 1894. They illustrate how the farmers are bled so that the Tory Government may have the support of the manufacturer's boodle: The value of the total exports not including bullion, was $112,426,658. Of this $103,776,744 represented the value of the "produce of mines, fisheries and forest; animals and their produce; agricultural products." The manufactures amounted to only $8,336,312. The total imports amounted to $123,474,940 of which $62,779,182 worth were dutiable and the duty amounted to $19,373,822. Of coal oil 6,608,270 gallons valued at $426,851 were imported, and the duty was $470,538—over a hundred per cent. $8,282,150 worth of raw sugar was admitted free, but the refined article was protected to the tune of twenty-seven per cent.

What resemblance, asks a contemporary, does any item of public expenditure in England bear to the Connolly-McGreevy steal of $56,000; the Curran Bridge steal of $270,000; the "hard pan" claim steal of $272,000; the waste of $476,000 on "Haggart's ditch," otherwise the Tay canal; the $224,000 dumped into the Caraque railway maw; the $394,000 wasted on the Little Rapids lock; the $568,000 cast into the Galops Rapids channel; the $1,118,000 squandered on "My Dear Onderdonk;" the $1,500,000 wasted, stolen or boddled in connection with the St. Charles branch of the I. C. R.; the $300,000 loaned to the Fredericton Bridge company, etc., etc., etc.? The total of the chief of these items foots up to more than five millions and a half, all of which represents what is, in truth, nothing short of public robbery. Comparisons are odious, but when such doings are compared with English procedure, the comparison becomes worse than odious. The suspicion of boddling in the British minister would be the same.

TROUT CULTURE AT HOME.

Any One Who Has a Pure Running Stream Can Raise Brook Trout.

The culture of brook trout, even on a small scale, is a source of continual delight, and with pure running water at hand anyone who has carefully observed the habits and requirements of trout in their native brooks can successfully raise them. If a stream crosses the farm the pond should not be made directly in line with the course or bed of it, or freshets may wash its embankments away. At least every hard rain will roll the pond, depositing mud to the detriment of the finny prisoners. If a stream is to supply the water make the pond at one side of it, but never on a flat that may be overflowed. The best method is to delve the reservoir out of the side of some slope rising from the stream, and then carry the water to it by an open feeder, high enough up its source to permit of a gentle, easy flow, as seen in the accompanying sketch. This feeder may be a deep, narrow ditch with sod banks, and protected at both its ingress and egress by finely woven wire screens. The pond itself may not be more than four or five feet deep in the centre, sloping to a shallow edge at the circumference. Break up the ground with a plow, and then use a common road scraper in moving the earth to the lowest side. Repeating this operation, a circular or oblong excavation is made with strong earth banks. Then place four rocks on the bottom, each as large as a half-bushel measure, letting them rest far enough apart to be covered by a large, flat stone, under which the shy fish may hide. One such covert is sufficient for a pond of two or three square rods in extent, while several should be provided in larger ponds. If possible make a cold spring tributary to the pond, or if practicable make the pond around it, utilizing the mountain head for the water supply. Trout will succeed best in cold spring water, but common creek water, if pure, will serve the purpose. Spread sand and gravel over the portion of the pond bed, but leave some of it with earth bottom. The slope surrounding the pond should be kept in grass, so that rains will not wash dirt into the water. A neat gravel walk should encircle the pond, and shade trees planted all out it will serve to keep the water cool.

When angling for trout in the brooks it will be noticed that more than one-half of the fish caught are so little injured by the hook that they will live

CROSS SECTION OF TROUT POND.

If immediately placed in fresh water. Carry a large pail, and by frequently changing the water two-thirds of the catch may be saved for stocking the fish pond. A slower way is to obtain the young fry from a fish hatchery. Very young trout can be fed on boiled eggs chopped fine, and larger ones on fresh beef cut into small pieces. Other scraps that the fish will eat, and which will not pollute the water, may be given them. They should be fed at least once a day, and in the cool of the evening they will frequently leap from the water to snap gamely at the food that is thrown to them.

Trout spawn in September and October, and it is well to take the screen away from the terminal end of the feeder in the fall, that the female fish may be encouraged to lay their eggs there.—American Agriculturist.

Dairy Notes.

Whenever the cows are not fed regularly they are kept in a restless condition, constantly expecting feed whenever the owner enters the farm, while if fed regularly the animals would be more quiet.

The regularity as well as the manner of the milker has much to do with the productiveness of the milk cow, as a allow the cream to get cold before plac-

T. H. WALLER,
March Bicycle.

The spirit of the moment that has sprung upon itself through the Grand Prix reaches its climax after the dinner hour, and finds an outlet among the trees and Chinese lanterns of the Jardin de Paris. There you will see all Paris. It is the crest of the highest wave of pleasure that rears itself and breaks there.

You will see on that night, and only on that night, all of the most celebrated women of Paris, racing with linked arms about the asphalt pavement, which circles around the band stand. It is for them their one night of freedom in public, when they are permitted to conduct themselves as do their less prosperous sisters, when, instead of reclining in a victoria in the Bois, with eyes demurely fixed ahead of them, they can throw off restraint, and mix with all the men of Paris, and show their diamonds, and romp and dance and chaff and laugh as they did when they were not so famous. The French swells who are their escorts have cut down Chinese lanterns with their sticks and stuck the candles inside of them on the top of their high hats with the burning tallow, and made living torches of themselves. So on they go, racing by—first a youth in evening dress, dripping with candle grease, and then a beautiful girl in a dinner gown with her silk and velvet opera cloak slipping from her shoulders—all singing to the music of the band, sweeping the people before them, or closing in a circle around some stately dignitary, and waltzing furiously past him to prevent his escape. Sometimes one party will storm the band-stand, and size the musicians' instruments, while another invades the stage of the little theatre, or overpowers the woman in charge of the shooting gallery or institutes a hurdle race over the iron tables, and the wicker chairs.

Or you will see Ambassadors and men of title from the Jockey Club jostling cockney bookmakers and English lords to look at a little girl in a linen blouse and a flat straw hat, who is dancing in the same circle of shining shirt-fronts vis-a-vis to the most talked of young person in Paris, who wears diamonds in ropes, and who rode herself into notoriety by winning a steeplechase against a field of French officers. The first is a hired dancer, who will kick off some gentleman's hat, when she wants it, and pass it round for money, and the other is a companion of princes, and has probably never been permitted to enter the Jardin de Paris before; but the are both of the same class, and when the music stops for a moment they approach each other smiling, each on her guard against possible condescension or familiarity; and the hired dancer who is as famous in her way as the young girl with the ropes of diamonds is in hers, compliments madame on her dancing, and madame calls the other "mademoiselle," and says, "How very warm it is!" and the circle of men around them, who are leaning on each other's shoulders and standing on benches or tables to look, smile delightedly at the spectacle. They consider it very chic, this combination. It is like a meeting between Madame Bernhardt and Yvette Guilbert.

But the climax of the night was reached last year when the band of a hundred pieces struck buoyantly into the most reckless and impudent of marches and comic songs, "The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo." The symbols clashed, and the big guns emphasized the high notes, and the brass blared out boastfully with a confidence and swagger that showed how sure the musicians were of pleasing that particular audience with that particular tune. And they were not disappointed. The three thousand men and women hailed the first bars of the song with a yell of recognition, and then, dancing and strutting to the rhythm of the tune, and singing and shouting it in French and English, they raised their voices in such a chorus that they could be heard defiantly proclaiming who they were and what they had done as far as the boulevards. And when they reached the high note in the chorus, the musicians, carried away by the fever of the crowd, jumped upon the chairs and held their instruments

How would the old swag, the old brag and deficits do as a rallying cry for the Tories.

As a sample of how the N. P. taxes luxuries, we have a 30 to 40 per cent duty on clothing while diamonds are admitted free.

It is about time to abolish a policy that taxes almost everything in sight from the cradle of the infant to the coffin of the deceased patriarch.

If the Beaver is the acknowledged representative of the Tory party in this district it is a good deal more dangerous to the party than American coal oil.

The Tory Government still pursues its policy of taxing the luxuries of life. Coal-oil bears a tax of 100 per cent while the oil of the attar of roses is admitted free.

"And you screamed?"
"I did. What else could I do? It was my last scene and I had no chance to redeem myself."
The bell sounded and the maid announced a man from the theater.
"Show him in," said the prima donna.

To the North Pole by Balloon.

M. Andre's project for reaching the north pole by balloon is now being examined by a committee of the French Academie des Sciences. Four important conditions must be satisfied; (5) An ascensional power of 6,600 pounds, to carry three observers, their instruments, ballast and provisions for four months; (2) a balloon that shall continue impermeable for four months; (3) conveniences for filling and starting it in the Arctic regions and, finally, some means of directing it. Nordenskjold thinks Andre can carry out his plan.

Married 100 years.

The Hundredth Man has a character of fiction, but it is reserved for sober fact and reality to instance the man who can celebrate his hundredth wedding anniversary. Such a celebration actually occurred during the month of April in a little village of Hungary, Szombulga by name, the still happy bridegroom being one hundred and sixteen years of age, and named Jean Szathmary, and his bride but a few years his junior.

These people were peasants, and among the poorest in the little Hungarian town, but the fact of their having lived to celebrate so unique an occurrence as the hundredth anniversary of their marriage has made them the most honored citizens of the place. The little municipality of Szombulga has voted them a pension, and so long as they live they will be taken care of by the village. The Viennese journals sent correspondents to describe the old couple in the fullest detail.

Little Willowdean, walking with her mother, stumbled several times over the pavement. Her mother said, "What is the matter, daughter?" "Nothing's the matter with me," she indignantly replied. "It's the ground is too thick in places."—New York Advertiser.

It was a triumphant, reckless yell of defiance and delight, it was the war cry of that class of Parisians of which one always reads and which one sees so seldom, which comes to the surface only at unusual intervals, and which, when it does appear, lives up to its reputations, and does not disappoint you.—Richard Harding Davis, in Harper's Magazine for June.

It is proposed to build a railroad from Port Said, at the mouth of the Suez Canal, across Northern Arabia, through Persia and Beloochistan, to Kurrachee, India, a distance of 2,400 miles, at a cost of $75,000,000.

For Contempt of Court.

Opposite the stage station and hotel was a shanty with a sign of "Jale" over the door, and I strolled over there and asked of a man sitting at the door and smoking a pipe:
"Can I take it that this is the County Jail?"
"You kin, sir," he promptly replied.
"Not much of a jail."
"No, sir; but it's a new county, you know."
"Any prisoners inside?"
"No, sir. I'm the only prisoner, and they allow me outside."
"Where's the sheriff or jailor?"
"Gone off hunting."
"And left you alone?"
"All alone. I'm purty comfortable, however, and my time will be out in about six months."
"But I should think you'd run away," I said, as I offered him a cigar.
"Whar to?" he queried in reply. "If I go to Grass Valley, the boys will hang me fur hoss stealing. If I go to Ridge City, they'll hang me fur stealin' a mawl. Over to Euchre Bend they want me to pull hemp fur robbin' Bill White. I might git up into the mountains, but the durned Indians would try fur my scalp. The safest place fur me is right here, and I hain't sayin' a word."
"My friend, would it hurt your feelings if I should ask why you were sent here?"
"Not a bit, sir. I killed a man."
"You did, eh? But how—how?"
"How did it happen I was sent to jail fur a yar insted of bein' hung?"
"Yes?"
"Oh, they didn't keer nuthin' about the killin', and gin me two hull months to walk off in. As I wouldn't go, the Jedge he said it was contempt of court, and sent me up here fur a yar, so he could hev the use of my coyuse and guns free gratis. Don't happen to hev a new deck of keards with you, eh?"
"Sorry to say I haven't."
"I was in hopes you had. The Jedge will be up this way to-morrer, and I'd hev the keards all marked and play him the best three out of five to see whether I drawed pay as jailor or scrubbed along as a prisoner."—St. Louis Republican.

THE TALE OF A FINGER BOWL.

Its Advent, Its Vogue, and Its Final Dethronement in Brownsville.

The finger-bowl struck Brownsville directly after the salted almond, and just before the embroidered centerpiece. Indeed, it followed so closely in the almond's wake that not more than three persons in town had begun to say "ah-mon"—the rest pronounced it "al-mond," and were very flat-footed about it.

The finger-bowl was introduced by Miss Jones at her tea-party. It was a red glass one with dimples, and Miss Jones passed it around herself after the guests had finished their tea. There were floating upon the water sunny thin slices of lemon, and, of course, the first two women drank out of it. Please don't fancy that had you never seen or heard of finger-bowls you would

Mrs. Peteish was the next to follow the fashion. She had two opalescent bowls with crinkly edges. She said that they were newer. And she dispensed with lemon. She let a geranium leaf float in each bowl, for, as she said, "geranium has a nasty taste, and those who drink once won't try it again." They didn't. And thus, at two sittings Brownsville was educated up to the finger-bowl. After that it was the rage, for, as Mrs. Peteish remarked, "There's one thing about we Brownvillites, we pick a thing up quick."

The male Brownvillite never took kindly to this innovation. When it was placed before him, he either quite ignored it, or else he tried to be funny about it, and said that he would "pass." In his heart he hated it.

Still the popularity of the finger-bowl increased, and it came on now in half dozens, with fringed doilies underneath. Even the younger set caught the craze, and some of the pretty girls would sit out dances together to hear about a new pattern of drawn work for a finger-bowl doyley, while the young men awkwardly waltzed about in pairs.

The men began to sneer more openly after this, and occasionally managed to upset and break a bowl as though by accident; but there was no organized revolt.

It was not until Christmas that it got its death warrant.

You see, there were a lot of children in the Rev. Mr. Goodman's family, and as times were hard and his salary behind, the poor man was discouraged and disheartened. So, when on Christmas morning a boy handed in a parcel marked—"For Our Pastor's Wife," it

THE WORLD-REFORMER AND HIS WIFE

Said Farmer John to Joiner Ned:
"Come put a back door on my shed."

Says Joiner Ned to Farmer John:
"I cannot put your back door on.
The Guild I'm interested in
For the abolishment of sin,
Meets at my house this very day,
And so I cannot get away."

"Well, after you've abolished sin
Come down to-morrow and begin;
I want that back door in my shed,"
Said Farmer John to Joiner Ned.

"To-morrow, neither, can I come,
The Friends of the Millennium
Meet at the house of Deacon Kent,
And I am first Vice-President."

"Well then, next Wednesday, without doubt,
When your millennium's started out,
Just let it take its course and spread,
And put that back door on my shed."

"I read an essay Wednesday, John,
Before the Culture Club, upon
'The Easiest Method to Restore
Our Long Lost Eden Here Once More.'
To foster peace, abolish war,
And render virtue popular."

"Well, get you Eden here all right
By sundown prompt, next Wednesday night;
And then, next Thursday morning,
Ned,
Come put that back door on my shed."

"The Anti-Hunger Club convenes
Next Thursday, down to Hiram
Green's,
And I have promised to orate
On how to crush and extirpate
Man's tendency for fish and meat,
His grovelling desire to eat."

"But won't you come down by-and-by,
We'll say two years from next July?
You'll have your various schemes put through,
You'll have the universe built new;
Come down then, with your tool-kit,
Ned,
And put that back door in my shed."

"I think," says Ned, "I'll take that chance
If you will pay me in advance;
For my wife says that we've no meat
And no flour in the house to eat;
This cash may save domestic strife,
And kind of pacify my wife."
—SAM WALTER FOSS.

The Pessimist.

He does nothin' all the livelong day but
sit aroun' an' groan,
An' the night-time he makes hidjus
with his everlastin' moan;
He never smiles; his face is allers in a
puckered frown,
An' he thinks hisself the poores', mos'
unlucky cuss in town.
He keers nothin' for thesayers, and the circus has no charm
For this miserable critter, and the fire
bell's alarm
Kaint rouse him up outen his woe; no
more to church he goes—
He's gitten irrelljus sence the corns came on his toes.

He hates each sign o' happiness, and if
he had his way,
He'd hang the girl acrost the street
what's singin' all the day;
What right's she got to be so gay when he's so full o' pain?
He bets if he got hol' o' her, she'd never sing again!
To heer o' balls an' parties causes him
an extry pang;
What keers he now for dancin' and the
fiddle's horrid twang?
He finds no scent in violet and no beauty
in the rose—
There's nothin' pretty to the man with corns upon his toes.

To him life's not worth livin'; to him the heavens' blue
Has given place to mournin' black; the
treetops' summer hue
Is yaller, dull an' gloomy-like; to him
the songbird's strain
Sounds like the scratchin' of a nail
acrost the window pane.
To him the sun's onwelcum, and the
laaf of girls an' boys
He calls a cursed nuisance, and he tells
'em hush their noise.
He hates his wife an' children; in his heart no gladness grows—
He's what they call a pessimist sence
corn came on his toes.

was morning a boy handed in a parcel marked—"For Our Pastor's Wife." It was almost with tears in his eyes that he carried it to his spouse.

"For you, dear," he said with a little quaver in his voice, as he began to unwrap the paper covering: "I do hope it's a black silk gown, for you need one so much. I don't mind all this poverty myself, but for you, my brave little woman; it is too—And then he saw the finger-bowls—six of them—red, blue,
green, yellow, opal and purple.

Bobby Petefish looked at the world through a rosy mist, and Bill Simpkins surveyed his mother through a golden glass.

"What! where did you boys get that colored glass?" she queried sharply.
"In the alley behind the minister's house," snickered Bill, producing a pocketful of glittering bits—red, blue,
green, yellow, opal and purple.

The reign of the finger-bowl declined rapidly after that, and now it is as a tale that is told. And to this day, when the Rev. Mr. Goodman walks abroad, the men of Brownsville say, "Ah! there goes a man!"—Puck.

Found the Missing Word.

A hotel clerk told this story: Three men from the country came into the hotel and registered for lodging, and a few minutes later two of them went out to see the town. "I will stay here," said the third, "and look at things," and he took a seat near the door.

At 10 o'clock, a half an hour later,
the man who was left went up to the clerk.

"I want to remain," said he.
"All right sir," answered the clerk.
The man stood back and looked at the clerk and finally went back to his chair near the door.

He sat still another hour and returned to the desk. "If you please, I'll remain," he said.

"That's all right sir," was the response. "We hope you'll be with us some time." The man hesitated and went back to the chair.

It was after midnight when he went up to the clerk for the third time. "I think I'll remain, sir," he said.

"We have no objections," answered
the man behind the desk.

The guest did not go back to his chair, however, but stood still. Shortly afterward another guest came up and asked the clerk for his key, "and I'll retire."

"Retire! Retire! That's the word I've been trying to think of for three hours.
For heaven's sake let me retire," interrupted the man who had desired to remain, and he was at last happy.

Compensation.

"Yes," sighed the Hammock, regretfully, "it was my fault that those sweet young people fell out."

"Never mind," rejoined the Bicycle-in its nickel-plated spokes, "I shall

MR. BINK'S DAY OFF.

A Study of a Clerk's Holiday.

When Binks was coming up town in a Broadway cable car one afternoon he caught some superficial glances of Madison Square as he ducked his head to peek through between a young woman's bonnet and a young man's newspaper. The green of the little park vaguely astonished Binks. He had grown accustomed to a white and brown park; now, all at once, it was radiant green. The grass, the leaves, had come swiftly, silently, as if a great green light from the sky had shone suddenly upon the little desolate hued place.

The vision cheered the mind of Binks. It cried to him that nature was still supreme; he had begun to think the banking business to be the pivot on which the universe turned. Produced by this wealth of young green, faint, faraway voices called to him. Certain subtle memories swept over him. The million leaves looked into his soul and said something sweet and pure in an forgotten song, the melody of his past. Binks began to dream.

When he arrived at the little Harlem flat he sat down to dinner with an air of profound dejection, which Mrs. Binks promptly constructed into an insult to her cooking, and to the time and thought she had expended in preparing the meal. She promptly resented it. "Will, what's the matter now?" she demanded. Apparently she had asked this question ten thousand times.

"Nothin'," said Binks, shortly, filled with gloom. He meant by this remark that his ailment was so subtle that her feminine mind would not be enlightened by any explanation.

The head of the family was in an ugly mood. The little Binkses suddenly paused in their uproar and became very wary children. They knew that it would be dangerous to do anything irrelevant to their father's bad temper. They studied his face with their large eyes, filled with childish seriousness and speculation. Meanwhile they ate with the most extraordinary caution. They handled their little forks with such care that there was barely a sound. At each slight movement of their father they looked apprehensively at him, expecting the explosion.

The meal continued amid a sombre silence. At last, however, Binks spoke, clearing his throat of the indefinite rage that was in it and looking over at his wife. The little Binkses seemed to inwardly dodge, but he merely said: "I wish I could get away into the country for a while."

His wife bristled with that brave anger which agitates a woman when she sees fit to assume that her husband is weak spirited. "If I worked as hard as you do, if I slaved over those old books the way you do, I'd have a vacation once in awhile or I'd tear their old office down." Upon her face was men upon the porch of a battered grocery store shaded their eyes with their hands. The Binkses felt dimly like a circus and were a trifle bewildered by it. Binks gazed up and down, this way and that; he tried to be unaware of the stare of the citizens. Finally, he approached the loungers, who straightened their forms suddenly and looked very expectant.

"Can you tell me where Miss Pattison lives?"

The loungers arose as one man. "It's the third house up that road there."

"It's a white house with green shutters!"

"There, that's it—yeh can see it through the trees!" Binks discerned that his wife's aunt was a well-known personage, and also that the coming of the Binkses was an event of vast importance. When he marched off at the head of his flock, he felt like a drum-major. His course was followed by the unwavering, intent eyes of the loungers.

The street was lined with two rows of austere and solemn trees. In one way it was like parading between the plumes on an immense hearse. These trees, lowly sighing in a breath-like wind, oppressed one with a sense of melancholy and dreariness. Back from the road, behind flower beds, controlled by box-wood borders, the houses were asleep in the drowsy air. Between them one could get views of the fields lying in a splendor of gold and green. A monotonous humming song of insects came from the regions of sunshine, and from some hidden barnyard a hen suddenly burst forth in a sustained cackle of alarm. The tranquility of the scene contained a meaning of peace and virtue that was incredibly monotonous to the warriors from the metropolis. The sense of a city is battle. The Binkses were vaguely irritated and astonished at the placidity of this little town. This life spoke to them of no absorbing nor even interesting thing. There was something unbearable about it. "I should go crazy if I had to live here," said Mrs. Binks. A warrior in the flood-tide of his blood, going from the hot business of war to a place of utter quiet, might have felt that there was an insipidity in peace. And thus felt the Binkses from New York. They had always named the clash of the swords of commerce as sin, crime, but now they began to imagine something admirable in it. It was high wisdom. They put aside their favorite expressions: "The curse of gold," "A mad passion to get rich," "The rush for the spoils." In the light of their contempt for this stillness, the conflicts of the city were exalted. They were at any rate wondrously clever.

But what they did feel was the fragrance of the air, the radiance of the sunshine, the glory of the fields and hills. With their ears still clogged by the tempest and fury of city uproars, they heard the song of the universal religion, the mighty and mystic hymn of nature, whose melody is in each landscape. It appealed to their elemental selves. It was as if the earth had called recreant and heedless children and the mother word, a vast might and significance, that was troubling the baby's temple. When she straightened up she saw that Binks, too, was absorbed in the contemplation of Tommie. They looked at each other presently, exchanging a vague smile. Through the silence came the voice of a plowing farmer berating his horses in a distant field.

The peace of the hills and the fields came upon the Binkses. They allowed Jimmie to sit up in bed and eat cake while his clothes were drying. Uncle Daniel returned from a wagon journey and recited them a ponderous tale of a pig that he had sold to a man with a red beard. They had no difficulty in feeling much interest in the story.

Binks began to expand with enormous appreciations. He would not go into the house until they compelled him. And as soon as the evening meal was finished he dragged his wife forth on a trip to the top of the hill behind the house. There was a great view from there, Uncle Daniel said.

The path, gray with little stones in the dusk, extended above them like a pillar. The pines were beginning to croon in a mournful key, inspired by the evening winds. Mrs. Binks had great difficulty in climbing this upright road. Binks was obliged to assist her, which he did with a considerable care and tenderness. In it there was a sort of reminiscence of their courtship. It was a repetition of old days. Both enjoyed it because of this fact, although they subtly gave each other to understand that they dislained this emotion as an altogether un-American thing, for she, as a woman, was proud, and he had great esteem for himself as a man.

At the summit they seated themselves upon a fallen tree, near the edge of a cliff. The evening silence was upon the earth below them. Far in the west the sun lay behind masses of corn-colored clouds, tumbled and heaved into crags, peaks and canyons. On either hand stood the purple hills in motionless array. The valley lay wreathed in sombre shadows. Slowly there went on the mystic process of the closing of the day. The corn colored clouds faded to yellow and finally to a faint luminous green, inexpressibly vague. The rim of the hills was then an edge of crimson. The mountains became a profound blue. From the night, approaching in the east, came a wind. The trees of the mountain raised plaintive voices, bending toward the faded splendors of the day.

This song of the trees arose in low, sighing melody into the still air. It was filled with an infinite sorrow—a sorrow for birth, slavery, death. It was a wail telling the griefs, the pains of all ages. It was the symbol of agonies. It celebrated all suffering. Each man finds in this sound the expression of his own grief. It is the universal voice raised in lamentations.

As the trees huddled and bended as if to hide from their eyes a certain sight the green tints became blue. A faint suggestion of yellow replaced the crimson. The sun was dead.

rebellions and powers

Binks felt the falsity of her emotion in a vague way, but at that time he only made a sullen gesture. Later, however, he cried out in a voice of sudden violence: "Look at Tommie's dress! Why the dickens don't you put a bib on that child?"

His wife glared over Tommie's head at her husband, as she leaned around in her chair to tie on the demanded bib. The two looked as hostile as warring redskins. In the wife's eyes there was an intense opposition and defiance, an assertion that she now considered the man she had married to be beneath her in intellect, industry, valor. There was in this glance a jeer at the failures of his life. And Binks, filled with an inexpressible rebellion at what was to him a lack of womanly perception and sympathy in her, replied with a look that called his wife a drag, an uncomprehending thing of vain ambitions, the weight of his existence.

The baby meanwhile began to weep because his mother, in her exasperation, had yanked him and hurt his neck. Her anger, groping for an outlet, had expressed itself in the nervous strength of her fingers. "Keep still, Tommie," she said to him. "I didn't hurt you. You needn't cry the minute anybody touches you?" He made a great struggle and repressed his loud sobs, but the tears continued to fall down his cheeks and his under lip quivered from a baby sense of injury, the anger of an impatient child who seems as he weeps to be planning revenges.

"I don't see why you don't keep that child from eternally crying," said Binks, as a final remark. He then arose and went away to smoke, leaving Mrs. Binks with the children and the disheveled table.

Later that night, when the children were in bed, Binks said to his wife: "We ought to get away from the city for awhile at least this spring. I can stand it in the summer, but in the spring—" He made a motion with his hand that represented the new things that are born in the heart when spring comes into the eyes.

"It will cost something, Phil," said Mrs. Binks. "That's true," said Binks. They both began to reflect, contemplating the shackles of their poverty. "And besides, I don't believe I could get off," said Binks after a time.

Nothing more was said of it that night. In fact, it was two or three days afterwards that Binks came home and said: "Margaret, you get the children ready on Saturday noon and we'll all go out and spend Sunday with your Aunt Sarah."

When he came home on Saturday his hat was far back on the back of his head from the speed he was in. Mrs. Binks was putting on her bonnet before the glass turning about occasionally to admonish the little Binkses, who, in their new clothes, were wandering around, stiffly, and getting into all sorts of small difficulties. They had been ready since 11 o'clock. Mrs. Binks had been obliged to scold them continually, one after the other, and sometimes three at once.

"Hurry up," said Binks, immediately, "ain't got much time. Say, you ain't going to let Jim wear that hat, are you? Where's his best one? Good heavens, look at Margaret's dress! It's soiled already! Tommie, stop that, do you hear? Well, are you ready?"

Indeed, it was not until the Binkses had left the city far behind and were careering into New Jersey that they recovered their balances. Then something of the fresh quality of the country stole over them and cooled their nerves. Horse cars and ferry-boats were maddening to Binks when he was obliged to convey a wife and three children. He appropriated the vast expanse of green, through which ran golden hued roads. The scene accentuated his leisure and his lack of responsibility.

Near the track a little river jostled over the stones. At times the pool thunder of its roar came faintly to the ear. The Ramapo Hills were in the background, faintly purple, and surmounted with little peaks that shone with the lustre of the sun. Binks began to joke heavily with the children. The little Binkses, for their part, asked the most superhuman questions about details of the scenery. Mrs. Binks leaned contentedly back in her seat and seemed to be at rest, which was a most extraordinary thing.

When they got off the train at the little rural station they created considerable interest. Two or three loungers began to view them in a sort of concentrated excitement. They were apparently fascinated by the Binkses and seemed to be indulging in all manner of wild and intense speculation. The agent, as he walked into his station, kept his head turned. Across the dusty street, wide at this place, a group of the universal thing whose power no one escapes. When a man hears it he usually remains silent. He understands then the sacrifice of speech.

When they came to the third house, the white one, with the green blinds, they perceived a woman in a plaid sun bonnet, walking slowly down a path. Around her was a riot of shrubbery and flowers. From the long and tangled grass of the lawn grew a number of cherry trees. Their dark green foliage was thickly sprinkled with bright red fruit. Some sparrows were scuffling among the branches. The little Binkses began to whoop at sight of the woman in the plaid sun bonnet.

"Hay-oh, Aunt Sarah, hay-oh!" they shouted.

The woman shaded her eyes with her hand. "Well, good gracious, if it ain't Margaret Binks! An' Phil, too! Well, I am surprised!"

"She came jowially to meet them. 'Why, how are yeh all? I'm awful glad t' see yeh!'"

The children, filled with great excitement, babbled questions and ejaculations while she greeted the others.

"Say, Aunt Sarah, gimme some cherries!"

"Look at th' man over there!"

"Look at th' flowers!"

"Gimme some flowers, Aunt Sarah!"

And little Tommie, red faced from the value of his information, bawled out: "Aunt Sarah, dey have horse tars where I live!" Later he shouted: "We come on a twain of steam tars."

Aunt Sarah fairly bristled with the most enthusiastic hospitality. She beamed upon them like a sun. She made desperate attempts to gain possession of everybody's bundles that she might carry them to the house. There was a sort of a little fight over the baggage. The children clamored questions at her; she tried heroically to answer them. Tommie, at times deluged her with news.

The curtains of the diningroom were pulled down to keep out the flies. This made a deep, cool gloom in which corners of the old furniture caught wandering rays of light and shone with a mild lustre. Everything was arranged with an unspeakable neatness that was the opposite of comfort. A branch of an apple tree moved by the gentle wind, brushed softly against the closed blinds.

"Take off yer things," said Aunt Sarah. Binks and his wife remained talking to Aunt Sarah, but the children speedily swarmed out, over the farm, raiding in countless directions. It was only a matter of seconds before Jimmie discovered the brook behind the barn. Little Margaret roamed among the flowers, bursting into little cries at sight of new blossoms, new glories. Tommie gazed at the cherry trees for a few moments in profound silence. Then he went and procured a pole. It was very heavy, relatively. He could hardly stagger under it, but with infinite toil he dragged it to the proper place and somehow managed to push it erect. Then with a deep earnestness of demeanor he began a little onslaught upon the trees. Very often his blow missed the entire tree and the pole thumped on the ground. This necessitated the most extraordinary labor. But then at other times he would get two or three cherries at one wild swing of his weapon.

Binks and his wife spent the larger part of the afternoon out under the apple trees at the side of the house. Binks lay down on his back, with his head in the long lush grass. Mrs. Binks moved lazily to and fro in a rocking chair that had been brought from the house. Aunt Sarah, sometimes appearing, was strenuous in an account of relatives, and the Binkses had only to listen. They were glad of it, for this warm, sleepy air, pulsating with the sounds of insects, had enchained them in a great indolence.

It was to this place that Jimmie ran after he had fallen into the brook and scrambled out again. Holding his arms out carefully from his dripping person, he was roaring tremendously. His new sailor suit was a sight. Little Margaret came often to describe the wonders of her journeys, and Tommie, after a frightful struggle with the cherry trees, toddled over and went to sleep in the midst of a long explanation of his operations. The breeze stirred the locks on his baby forehead. His breath came in long sighs of content. Presently he turned his head to cuddle deeper into the grass. One arm was thrown in childish abandon over his head. Mrs. Binks stopped rocking to gaze at him. Presently she bended and noiselessly brushed away a spear of grass of the trees awe. They had remained motionless during this ceremony; their eyes fell upon the mighty and indefinable changes which spoke to them of the final thing—the inevitable end. Their eyes had an impersonal expression. They were purified, chastened by this sermon, this voice calling to them from the sky. The hills had spoken and the trees had crooned their song. Binks finally stretched forth his arm in a wondering gesture.

"I wonder why," he said; "I wonder why the dickens it—why it—why—"

Tangled in his tongue was the unformulated question of the centuries, but Mrs. Binks had stolen forth her arm and linked it with his. Her head leaned softly against his shoulder.

PLAN OF DAIRY BARN

NEW UPDATE
Obtains in Convenience,
Comfort, Economy of Labor, and Cheap
Construction are Its Commendable Features.

The plan of a barn shown above will accommodate 10 to 25 cows, a few horses, tools and machinery. No one barn can be just what will meet the needs of different farmers, differently situated, but the above plan has been found very convenient after several years' use. The plan presented is one employed in the dairy region of Iowa, and will apply elsewhere. The strong points in its favor are convenience, comfort, economy of labor in filling, feeding, cleaning out, easy access to the different kinds of forage and cheap construction.

First, make the main part, or hay barn, long enough to hold all the hay, clover, timothy, millet, sheaf oats, corn fodder or other similar food. The frame is spiked together, the posts and braces being of 2x8 in. stuff and the rafters 2x6 in. The posts are 6 ft. and the rafters 3 ft. apart. The braces are 12 ft. apart, and fastened to every second post and fourth rafter. The roof will not sag, and the walls will not spread, fastened together in this way. A hay fork runs the whole length and there are no crossbeams in the way. The braces or ties, partially divide the whole haymow into 12-ft. sections. These sections are easily filled in any desired order and fed out in any order just as easily. For convenience in feeding, this plan is unsurpassed as the forage from each section can be thrown direct into the feeding alley. Hang a steel track for hay fork in the peak of the roof.

Another feature of this plan is that only so much of the barn need be built at first as is needed. The additions for stock and machinery can be built when desired. The room for grain or tools can be suited to each farmer's needs. Windows are not shown in the sketch but put them in wherever needed. Have plenty of doors to the cow stable. They are extremely handy for ventilating in hot weather. In cleaning the advantage of numerous doors is also strongly felt, as the manure can be thrown direct from the stall into a wagon, shed or manure boat. The posts of the lean-to need be no heavier than 2x6 in. In my barn they are of 2x4 in. stuff and answer every purpose. Make the hay barn any height desired. Look at the "rear view" cut and see how it is protected from the wind.

Suppose you have 20 cows. A hay barn 60 ft. long will give you room on one side for the 20 cows. If the hay barn is but 24 ft. wide it is easier to fill and easier to feed from than the wide;

FARM AND GARDEN.

An Improvement in the Formula for Making Bordeaux Mixture—Less Injurious to Foliage.

This was first suggested by M. Perret at a meeting of the National Agricultural Society of France, and it was designed to remove certain objections to the use of the old mixture. It has the advantage over that famous mixture in being less injurious to foliage, less liable to be washed away by rains, and less likely to choke the nozzle of the spraying machine. The new formula is as follows: Quicklime, 4 pounds 6 ounces; sulphate of copper, 4 pounds 6 ounces; molasses, 4 pounds 6 ounces; water, 22 gallons. The essential difference between the new and old formula is the presence of the molasses, which has a greater influence than would at first be suspected. The prescription, as given by M. Perret, is to add the molasses to 13 gallons of water, then slack the lime and add four and a half gallons of water to form a milk of lime. Pour this slowly into the sweetened water, stirring briskly in order to mix intimately. Next, in the third (wooden) vessel, dissolve the bluestone and pour this into the previous mixture, stirring well. In this blending of materials chemical changes are taking place. When the milk of lime and the sweetened solution are intimately mixed together, then saccharate of lime is formed. Next, when to this is added the solution of sulphate of copper a double decomposition takes place, sulphate of lime is formed on the one and soluble saccharate of copper on the other. This saccharate of copper is only formed in presence of an excess of lime, and its formation is indicated by the mixture assuming a beautiful greenish tinge. Thus the mixture is rendered alkaline and the acid is neutralized by the lime.

Preventing Swarming.

A paper on how to keep bees from swarming, written by Mr. F. W. Clarke of Guelph, Ont., was read at a recent bee-keepers' convention at Albany. After much study of the causes of swarming, he had come to consider it abnormal and experimented much to prevent it. He took six of his strongest colonies, gave them plenty of room and a comb, and only one was inclined to swarm. In one case a colony started to swarm, he checked it, and found the frames full of sealed honey. He gave them fresh frames, and they went to work again. Sometimes bees get too hot and swarm after cooling off, they return. This is not a new idea; in 1814 a writer notes the need of more room to keep bees quiet. One or two non-swarming hives have been put upon the market, but the problem is not yet solved. There is such a thing as a swarming mania. Mr. C. had cured it by catching the swarm in a bag of cheese-cloth, twisting the top and hanging it to the fence overnight. In the morning the bees were glad to return home. Mr. Crane had tried all methods known to him and had failed. Mr. Cogshall uses a queen excluder, and removes brood from the lower to the upper story. A member had made the same change for three years and without swarming. He makes extracted honey, and does not think the plan applicable to comb honey. Mr. Doolittle said that preventing swarming is a simple matter for extracted honey, but not for a comb. He had never succeeded. The desire to swarm is instinctive, and it is not possible to produce a non-swarming race of bees. More honey can be had by conforming to this instinct. Mr. Cornell described the device of a Canadian bee-keeper, a revolving platform, which he effectively mixed the bees in the hives and prevented swarming. President Howard selected 400 swarms from 100 took queens away, cut out queen cells and returned queens in 20 days, and swarming was prevented.

Live Stock Notes.

Hens should never be fed so well that when they are given a good ration, they will not forage a good portion of the time.

It is best that a cow should be given a rest every year and not milked continuously, as she will do better if given this chance to recuperate.

If your cows get the habit of stopping at night on the dry land in the back end of the pasture, make a road and a bridge so they will not dread to come home.

WOMEN CLAD IN WOOD

A NEW PROCESS BY WHICH SILK IS PRODUCED FROM WOOD.

Already Extensively Used—The New Material Costs Less Than Natural Silk and is Said to be Beautiful.

A process has been discovered by which a material closely resembling silk may be manufactured from wood. Even now women are walking about the streets of European cities in the most elaborate gowns of silk in the manufacture of which the worm had no part. In fact, the silkworm has lost its occupation.

The palm for this valuable discovery in chemical science must go to Switzerland, for a native of Zurich, Dr. Lehner, by name, is the inventor of the process.

Some years ago he began to make observations in the habits and physical characteristics of the silkworm and became deeply interested in the subject. He also veiled the chemical action which took place in the worm in producing its cocoon, and at odd times sought to counterfeit the work of nature. So convinced did he become of the feasibility of his ideas that he soon abandoned all other work and devoted his time to this single study, in which he has achieved a signal triumph.

In the process of manufacturing the new fabric the principal ingredients used are sprucewood pulp, cotton or jute waste, etc., combined with a large quantity of alcohol. The use of the substantial or solid materials mentioned creates a market for what was hitherto of no use whatever, being burned in factory furnaces to get it out of the way.

Spruce sawdust now has a market value, for this, as well as the other materials, are digested by a chemical process in which alcohol plays an important part. The material thus digested is so much like the cocoon spun by the silkworm that when the two are placed side by side in a finished state it takes an expert to determine which is which.

The artificial material at one state is in a liquid state, and of a density about equal to the ordinary syrup of commerce. When in this state a machine of Dr. Lehner's invention, which may be called an artificial silkworm, comes into play. This machine, which is very simple in construction, requiring so little attention that it can be kept at work with about as much labor as is devoted to a twenty-four hour clock, performs exactly the same mechanical work that a silkworm does. It draws from the liquid a continuous unbroken thread of even diameter and unlimited length. As this thread is spun another portion of the machine takes it up and twists it into any desired thickness of yarn with perfect regularity.

Thus the fabric can be made of any desired weight or thickness, so that it will be seasonable at all times.

This artificial silk has been spun in Bradford, England, and worked up into a large variety of fabrics. In dyeing, weaving and finishing of these no special treatment has been found necessary. It has been dyed in all imaginable shades and colors, and owing to the peculiar qualities of the material it takes a dye more readily and gives a more brilliant effect than the natural article. In texture it is the equal of the best of Chinese and Italian silks, being soft and silken to the touch. It is expected that it will be used largely in combination with natural silk and cotton for producing broad-cloth effects. These latter have been so expensive lately as to be out of the reach of all but the fattest purses. The new invention will reduce the cost.

It would seem that this new process would give an immense impetus to the manufacture of textile fabrics all over the world, and it probably will, but Dr. Lehner also differs from the average inventor in that he combines special cunning with his remarkable genius, so that every yard of this new material made will put many pennies into his pocket.

Patents on the process have been obtained in most of the European countries, and an application for one in the United States is now on file at Washington, as well as in the patent office of the Canadian Government. A company with a capital stock of $1,500,000 is about to be formed in Montreal to manufacture the material. There has already been formed in England a company having a capital stock of $540,000, the inventor receiving $180,000 in cash and $180,000 in full-paid shares, the remaining $200,000 being used as a working capital.

It was originally intended to manufacture the article in England, but when the demonstrating plant was established at Bradford it was found that there was a prohibitive tax on alcohol used for manufacturing purposes. For that reason the plant was located at Glatburg, near Zurich, Germany, where there is no tax on alcohol used in manufactures. From this place the raw material is sent to England for manufacture.—New York World.

Every Man Who Would Know the Grand Truths of the Plain Facts; the New Discoveries of Medical Science as applied to Married Life, Who Would Avoid the Pitfalls of Errors and Avoid Future Pitfalls, Should Secure the Wonderful Little Book called "COMPLETE MANHOOD" and How to Attain It.

Here at last is information from a high medical source that must work wonders with this generation of men.

The book fully describes a method by which to attain full vigor and manly power.

A method by which to end all unnatural drains on the system.

To cure nervousness, lack of self control, dependence, etc.

To exchange a jaded and worn nature for one of brightness, buoyancy and power.

To cure forever effects of excesses, overwork, worry, etc.

To give full strength, development and tone to every portion and organ of the body.

Age no barrier. Failure impossible. 2,000 references.

The book is purely medical and scientific, useless to curious seekers, invaluable to men only who need it.

A despairing man, who applied to us soon after wrote:

"Well, I tell you that first day is one I'll never forget. I just bubbled with joy. I wanted to hug everybody and tell them, my old self had died yesterday and my new self was born today. Why didn't you tell me when I first wrote that I would do it this way?"

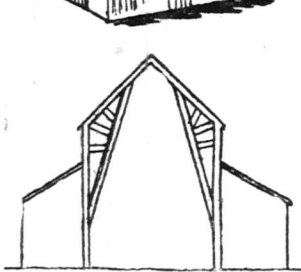

And another thus:

"If you dumped a cartload of gold at my feet it would not bring such gladness into my life as your method has done."

Write to the EDITOR MEDICAL COMPANY, Buffalo, N. Y., and ask for the little book called "COMPLETE MANHOOD." Refer to this paper and the company promises to send the book, in sealed envelope, without any marks and entirely free, until it is well introduced.

PERHAPS

Some day someone somewhere will make cumbrous, expensive barns built for show and the expenditure of money. Do not board up the hay barn on the sides where the lean-tos are. Leave it all open so hay can be thrown direct into the alleys in front of the mangers. If the cow stable proves too cold, put a partition between the feeding alley and the manger, made of drop doors which can be closed when blizzards blow and opened for ventilation in mild weather. Don't put the manger close up to the hay barn. Build it 3 or 4 ft. away so as to leave a good feeding alley.

All the timbers of the barn have to support is the roof. If incredulous in regard to this kind of frame, make a similar one out of laths and test its strength. You will be surprised. The short pieces nailed from the long brace to post and rafter may be of felling. They are apt to keep the brace from twisting or "buckling." Make your barn any length you desire, put the hay in the center part, the stock in the additions, and if you can't find a carpenter to do the work, take a saw, a square and a hammer and build it yourself. The above suggestions are not for millionaire farmers, but for where economy, convenience and comfort are important considerations.—Farm and Home.

The Nebraska Farmer very aptly says that it is nature's way to permit of not stop-offs on the route traveled by the pig from the farrowing nest to the packing house, and that regular development must occur for the highest profit. Feeding the dam is said to be feeding the pigs, and the food of the mother should be prepared in view of this fact.

When buying a horse for use on the farm seven years is the age that the animal is worth most. If well broken then and never injured in any way the buyer escapes many chances of mishap, while the seven-year-old horse has fully as many years of effective work as the average of horses bought younger. If kept exclusively on the farm and not fed heavily with grain a horse may do good work till it is 25 or 28 years old. It is fast driving on the road that shortens the years of usefulness of a horse. Not only are the feet injured by such work, but the nervous system is stimulated unnaturally.

For feeding in bulk clover hay is objected to by many farmers because it is liable to be dusty. It is so rich in nitrogen that it heats very easily if bad weather occurs while the clover is curing, and in the barn there is apt to be some heating of clover hay in the mow. Horses are very fond of clover, and will gorge themselves on it so as to be unfit to do hard work. But for cut feed to be used with moistened corn and oatmeal and bran, the clover hay is very much better than is timothy, and a less number of pounds will be needed to keep the horses in good condition for working.

There is always a good demand for thrifty breeding sows. It pays farmers to grow sows for this market. About half the pigs of a litter will be sows, but the young males can be fattened early and turned off at a good profit. The sows should not be fattened, but kept in thrifty growth, and be given milk and wheat middlings to promote the growth of bone. Sows thus grown will be long bodied, will be ready for breeding early, and will produce larger litters than those kept over fat. It is not unusual that a young sow with pig, if of good breed, will sell for twice what she would be worth to fatten, and she will give a good profit to the buyer at that price.

Disabled.

Shortly after leaving Deseronto on Saturday last the main shaft in the machinery of the Steamer Reindeer broke, completely disabling her. The Steamer Merritt on her way to Picton with the Belleville excursion gallantly came to her rescue, and in a short while about twenty passengers were transferred to the Merritt, and the Reindeer towed into Deseronto by a tug, which came out in response to her whistles. The damages to the Reindeer are in the neighborhood of $200. The Nellie Cuthbert will run on her route until she is repaired.

Dame Durden Society.

The lawn social on Friday evening of last week given under the auspices of the Dame Durden Society was highly successful, and a most enjoyable evening was spent. The beautiful lawn of Mr. T. G. Carscadden was brilliantly illuminated with Japanese lanterns, and the music of the 47th Batt. Band was greatly appreciated. The entertainment was gotten up for charitable purposes, and the young ladies taking part in it are deserving of great praise. It is to be regretted that the number of people who took in the entertainment from the outside of the lawn to avoid the formality of paying the nominal admission fee of 15c., outnumbered those on the inside three to one.

Slightly Disfigured.

Nellie Cuthbert lost her rudder and broke a flange off her wheel on Tuesday. She was towed into Deseronto by the steam yacht "Avis" the Nellie left Deseronto with an improvised rudder in the shape of a plank out behind, and a beam to hold it in place.

A Pleasant Visit.

On Sunday last the congregations of St. John's church, Selby, and St. Jude's, Kingsford, were delighted with the presence of their former pastor, the Rev. Mr. Forester, and his wife, of Prince Edward. The rev. gentleman stopped off on his way home from the Synod, renewing old acquaintances and preaching at both appointments to very large congregations, in the absence of their pastor, Rev. R. Atkinson.

The Bicycle Race.

A large crowd congregated at the Park on Friday evening last to witness the bicycle race between Messrs. H. McDougall and Ed. Douglas. Mr. Douglas took the lead and kept it until about half way round the track when Mr. McDougall passed him and beat him by quite a distance. Mr. Douglas was not in very good shape for the event, and another race will, no doubt, take place between them at no remote period. The bicycle club propose holding races every Friday evening to stimulate the boys to greater effort.

A Painful Accident.

A painful accident occurred at Consequon on Saturday. A number of young men went on Mr. Johnston's wharf to swim, and one young man, six feet three inches and weighing 215 pounds, jumped off the wharf and did not come up. His comrades seeing something wrong, jumped to the rescue and found him unable to move. They got him out of the water and summoned Dr. Shurie, who found him paralyzed. He struck his head on the bottom, the water being only three feet deep, and hurt his spine. He is alive yet, but his death is expected at any time. He was a fine young man. His father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wilson, have the sympathy of the whole neighborhood.—Trenton Courier.

Death of Mr. P. O'Connor.

The Deseronto Tribune states that Mr. Patrick O'Connor one of the best known residents of Deseronto, passed away on the 29th inst., after a long illness, the disease being cancer, which had seated itself in the neck. Deceased was born in Ballyfin, Queen's County, Ireland, on July 10th, 1840. In 1869 he went to Deseronto where he started in the hotel business. By careful attention he worked up an excellent business and in time enlarged the hotel, which, known as the O'Connor House became one of the most popular hostleries in Ontario. Few hotelmen were more held in esteem by the travelling public. He is survived by his wife and five of their six children, viz:—Mrs. (Dr.) Moher, of Trenton, William, Fred, Lulu, and Frank.

Coxey's Army

Tramps are getting altogether too numerous in this vicinity and chief of police Storms intends arresting all suspicious looking characters in the future, or running them out of town. On Tuesday evening he arrested two young healthy looking tramps who had been around begging all day. The chief came across them at the foot ball ground up near the collegiate institute. One of them resisted arrest, and ran down the road towards the railroad track at a good pace. A number of the boys, who were playing foot ball at the time, let out after the fleeing knight of the road, and Ed. Hayes, whose foot ball training stood him in good stead, easily overtook him, and brought him back to the chief, who manacled him to his companion, and towed them down to the police station where they spent the night. Two other tramps were arrested at the G. T. R. station the same evening, but on their consenting to remove themselves outside of the corporation, they were allowed their liberty.

procured by anyone who so desires, by dropping a post card to Mr. H. J. Hill, the Manager, at Toronto. Already many applications have been received from manufacturers both in Canada and from abroad for space to exhibit their products, and present indications point to a greater and grander Exhibition than any of the previous ones. Cheap excursions will as usual be run on all railroads, and this will undoubtedly be the most popular holiday outing of the year. Numerous new and interesting attractions will be provided. Almost everyone who claims to keep posted on the progress of our country goes to the Toronto Fair, which is generally admitted to be the best on this continent.

N-a-p-a-n-ee-Napanee, Rah! Rah! Rah!

The Scarlet foot ball club of Napanee accompanied by thirteen enthusiastic friends boarded Mr. Geo. Snider's trim and ship shape steam yacht on Friday, 21st inst. at 2.30 p. m., and journeyed to Glenora to play a match with the team of that place. The run to Glenora was made in good time, and about 7 o'clock the opposing teams lined up on the football ground, which is situated on the mountain. The Glenora team was a good deal the heavier of the two, but this did not appear to be much of an advantage to them as whenever it came to a "check" the Glenora men invariably went down. The Napanee boys presented a fine appearance in their scarlet shirts and white knickerbockers, and lined up as follows: Forwards, Wagar and Grievie, Fox, Preston and Exley; half backs, Skates, Trimble, Grange; backs, Scott, Ashley; goal, Hayes. W. B. Haines, the captain, was unable to play owing to the effect of a sprained back, but he was an interested spectator. D. Henwood acted as referee in an impartial manner. The first goal was scored by Fox, after a brilliant bit of combination work by the Napanee forwards. After this the Glenora team fell back and played largely on the defence. Time and again Napanee brought the ball up to their opponent's goal, but errors at critical periods prevented them from scoring. Forner of Picton, who played back for Glenora, put up an excellent game and stopped many a hot shot. The goal scored by Glenora was purely an individual play. The Glenora men were all bunched around their goal, and the Napanee boys were playing well up, the backs being stationed over the centre line, when the ball was shot out to one of Glenora's swift men, who with a quick rush passed the backs, and with no one between him and goal but the goal keeper, scored. After this the game got a little rough. Charing was freely indulged, and the Glen men went down like ninepins before their more experienced checks. The combination work of the Napanee boys was splendid, but they seemed sadly deficient in shooting on goal. Shortly before time was called Napanee rushed the ball down to the goal but were prevented from scoring by one of their opponents deliberately fouling the ball in goal, a very unsportsmanlike action. In the penalty kick which followed, Fox made a poor kick, and it was easily stopped by the Glenora goal keeper. Where all did well it is perhaps invidious to particularize, but the playing of Messrs. Frank Grievie, C. Rox, C. Trimble and Wm. Grange is worthy of special note, the rest of the boys put up a good game also, and altogether the Napanee foot ball club is all right, yes, you bet! After the match an adjournment was made to the Glen House, where mine host Cornell had caused to be spread an excellent repast, to which, it is needless to add, due justice was done. After the boys had given evidence that their vocal organs were unimpaired, and a number of them had demonstrated that if they couldn't sing they could yell anyway, the dance hall was visited, and the light fantastic tripped with the pretty girls of Glenora for several hours, until in response to the warning whistle of the captain the boys repaired to the yacht and reluctantly bid adieu to Glenora amid the hearty cheers of the good people of the Lake on the Mountain. Owing to the difficulty of navigating the river at night a halt was made at Deseronto until 3 o'clock. When about a mile out of Deseronto the Captain was forced to drop anchor owing to the density of the fog, the heaviest that has risen in this district for many years we have been informed, and there he was forced to lay until about 5 o'clock, the time being whiled away very pleasantly with songs, recitations, impromptu poetical effusions and divers other ways unnecessary to recapitulate. About fifteen minutes to six on Saturday morning the yacht pulled into the dock, the boys joining unanimously in voting Capt. Snider a jolly good fellow, and congratulating themselves on having had one of the most enjoyable outings of the season.

A Fatal Accident.

Mr. Lyman Moore, a popular young drug clerk of Belleville was fatally injured at Madoc Junction at 9.40 o'clock Wednesday morning. He was on his way to Peterboro with the I. O. O. F. excursion when the accident occurred. At the Madoc Junction station Mr. Moore got off the rear end of the train, and, in attempting to get on the front of the train while it was in motion he missed his hold and fell to the ground, rolling under the car. One pair of wheels passed over both his legs. The right leg was severed near the body and the left leg was severed just below the knee. He was conveyed to Belleville, and died in the hospital there at 12.25. He was a jovial, kind hearted young man, and highly popular wherever known.

Fredericksburgh base ball club played their first match of the season with the Cressy team. Notwithstanding the fact that both teams have had but little practice a fairly good game was played, resulting in a score of 21 to 25 in favor of Fredericksburgh. Mr. F. Connors, of Pryner, umpired the game, giving perfect satisfaction. It might also be said that Fredericksburgh was never visited by a quieter or more agreeable club. On July 2nd a return match will be played at Pryner's Cove. As a picnic will take place there on the same afternoon a general good time may be expected.

Our Enterprising Bill Poster.

Mr. J. J. Minchinton has just erected a new bill board on Centre Street, which commands a good view and will prove an important addition to his already extensive and prominently situated bill boards. Mr. Minchinton is an enterprising citizen and is fully conversant with the bill posting business. He owns or controls all the bill boards in town, and has had them conspicuously erected on almost every prominent street. The work is done in a practical and businesslike manner, and we are safe in saying that no town in the central district commands a larger, better distributed or as well displayed set of bill boards as Napanee. Since he took control of the bill posting the business has picked up wonderfully, and extensive advertisers tell us that, outside of newspaper advertising, there is no form of advertising that pays them as well.

A Shocking Disaster.

The Picton Times gives the following additional particulars of the disaster that befell Mr. Robert Goodwin: On Friday afternoon Robert Goodwin, of Athol had his barn, drivehouse, hog pen, with their contents, destroyed by fire and himself severely burned. He was with his oldest boy at work in a back field and his wife and children had gone to Cherry Valley. He saw the fire in the barn and ran to save his goods. He got a horse out and opened the door to get out a wagon. The flames burst out fiercely. He got the wagon out, and he was so severely burnt and dazed that he could not take his clothes off. Neighbors came to the assistance and Mr. Goodwin was found to be terribly burnt throughout his body, particularly on the neck where there is a dangerous burn near the jugular. He is kept rolled in sweet oil. Hopes are entertained of his recovery. He is a brother of George Goodwin of Napanee, Miss Martha Goodwin, Mrs. John Moore, and Mrs. David Shannon. The origin of the fire is unknown. There was a fire in a field eighty rods away and a fair wind was blowing in the direction of the barn. There is said to be $1,100 insurance.

Electric Light.

During the session of the Dominion Parliament of 1894 an Act was passed for the inspection of electric light, its provisions being somewhat similar to the gas inspection Act. It requires electric light companies to provide electric energy of a certain voltage; to maintain their lines, fittings and apparatus in a condition fit to supply the needed energy; prohibits their using any meter until it has been inspected and stamped; requires these meters to be re-inspected every five years; provides the infliction of heavy penalties upon anyone "who maliciously or fraudulently abstracts, causes to be wasted or diverted, consumes or uses any electricity," determines the kind of meters that may be used and the kinds of apparatus that are to be supplied to make the tests. His Excellency in Council has now put the act in force, has prescribed the geographical boundaries of each Inspectorial Division and appointed the Division officers. Under these Orders in Council this province is divided into five divisions viz., Belleville, Hamilton, London, Ottawa and Toronto. The Belleville Division comprises the Inland Revenue Divisions of Belleville, Kingston, Prescott, Cornwall and Peterborough, embracing the counties of Hastings, Prince Edward, Frontenac, Lennox and Addington, Leeds and Grenville, Dundas, Glengary, Prescott, Stormont, Northumberland, Durham, Peterborough, Victoria and Haliburton. At each chief office for the division elaborate testing apparatus will be provided, and portable instruments for inspection at other points. Mr. Wm. Johnston has been appointed the Divisional Inspector for the district.—Intelligencer.

Cricketers.

Victory perched on the banner of the Chicago club in every game they played in this district, and on their way home they stopped over at Toronto to administer a defeat to the Rosedale cricket club by a score of 151 to 53. They know how to play the game, and their exhibition of it in this district last week will do much to enhance its popularity. The final match in Napanee on Saturday resulted as was generally expected in a victory for the visitors by an innings and 7 runs. The only changes made in the Napanee team defeated by Chicago on Monday of last week by an innings and 3 runs were Widdifield, of Picton, Ince, of Belleville, and W. and H. Daly, of Napanee. Some good playing was indulged in by both sides, the superb fielding of the Chicago team being a pleasing feature. The following is the score:

NOTES.

Although the Napanee cricket club could not beat their opponents at cricket, they can and did surpass all the other teams in the district in hospitality.

Saturday was a bad day for getting together a district team. A number of able cricketers who would otherwise have taken part were unavoidably absent owing to the demands of business.

The Chicago team defeated the Picton cricketers by 71 runs to 44.

The Gentlemen of Chicago intend making this an annual trip, and they will visit this district about this time next year.

Rev. T. D. Phillips preached in St. Mary Magdalene's church on Sunday evening.

The visitors left on the midnight Sunday for home. They professed to be delighted with the trip and were much taken up with the scenery along the Bay of Quinte.

Capt. Holmes brought the Chicago team from Picton to Napanee in his yacht on Friday evening last. On Sunday he treated the team to a delightful cruise down the Bay as far as Adolphustown, where they stopped to attend church.

Dr. Leonard gave an elegant six o'clock dinner to the visitors on Saturday.

Mr. S. C. Warner gave a reception in honor of the Chicago team at his beautiful residence on Saturday evening. A number of Napanee's pretty ladies were present, and dancing was indulged in, and a most enjoyable time spent.

How do you like the knee breeches and the "artful" buttons—"it is English, you know—quite English."

Mr. Wm. Hayes met with a serious accident Thursday. He was splitting wood when his axe caught in a clothes line and came down on him inflicting a deep and painful gash on his head.

The fourteen year old son of Mr. T. B. Chamberlain, Belleville road, who had his leg amputated above the knee last week is progressing favorably. About six weeks ago he struck it with a hatchet while playing, blood poisoning ensued and it was found necessary to amputate it.

A cat belonging to Mrs. Butland gave birth to a decided curiosity last week. Its head resembles an ordinary kitten, but there the resemblance ceases, as the rest of its body has all the points of a genuine rabbit, and has the short tail peculiar to that animal.

The report that horse-flesh, masquerading as good cow beef, is being sold by the ton in Chicago, will be good news to owners of race-horses which have turned out to be no good. When the horses fail to win prizes on the turf, they can be turned into prize beef.

Information has been received that a dappled grey horse hitched to a top buggy has been stolen from Picton by a horse thief named Wiggins. Wiggins is described as being 5ft. 8in. in height, slim and of fair complexion.

The Salvation Army here ran an excursion to Belleville per Steamer Merritt on Thursday evening of last week. It was well patronized, but owing to the difficulty of navigating the river at night the excursionists did not land in Napanee till six o'clock the next morning.

Two cars loaded with butter ran off the track at the G. T. R. station on Tuesday. The box heated on the front car twisting the axle off, derailling both cars. The auxiliary from Belleville came down in the afternoon and they were patched up sufficiently to be taken to the Round house for repairs.

The Tribune says: George Deroche, of the well known office of Messrs. Deroche & Madden, Napanee, will open a law office in Deseronto. Mr. Deroche has passed most successful examinations and being a young man of excellent character there is no doubt he will merit a large share of public patronage.

Mrs. Hartley, who was tried for the murder of her husband, of New Durham, has now received $3,000 of the $4,000 insurance which her husband had upon his life, the remaining $1,000 has been paid into court by the Home Circle and a fight for its possession will take place between Mrs. Hartley and her son.

It may not be generally known that new milk cans when exposed to the rays of the sun will rapidly cause a fire. A farmer near Athens recently discovered that the platform about a well on his grounds was on fire. It was noticed and extinguished but to the surprise of the family it was found the next day to be burning in precisely the same place. For some time they were at a loss to discover the reason, but it was afterwards found that the new milk can which had been left standing on the platform was the cause.
